Prep for Summer Gear
Now is an ideal time to service your equipment, from lawn mowers and grills to power mowers and tillers. If you live in a climate where you'll need your outdoor gear next spring, a fall cleanup is important this year because it will help prevent rust, stains, and other kinds of deterioration.

Clean your equipment: Faithful cleaning of your barbecue grill after each use doesn't prevent stubborn spots. A thorough cleanup now will give it a fresh start. Soak your towels in a strong water mixture, and scrub the towels on grill top and other soiled areas. Soak the equipment for an hour or more before cleaning the towels and grill. After the cooked-on spots have had time to soak, finish the cleanup with a heavy-duty scouring pads or cleanser powder. Wash, rinse, and dry thoroughly.

Tools: Tools and smoky smokers respond to the same methods.

Rust tools: To protect your investment in garden tools, take time for a thorough service job in the fall. Clean and other maintenance tasks are essential if you store your tools the winter. When you put them at use, they're protected from rust and corrosion.

Use the following checklist as a guide:

Remove sand, grass particles, and dirt from all hand tools. Clean metal parts with a stiff brush and remove rust with an abrasive cleaner. Apply a coating oil on metal surfaces storing tools.

Clean all parts of your garden with water. Flush the hoses and dry thoroughly and store them in the sun. Remove the soil particles from the duster with a soft cloth. On the sprayers, use the lubricant recommended by the manufacturer.

Clean mower fertilizer or seeder your spreader, then your hopper with a jet of water. Let equipment dry in the sun. Oil all moving parts.

Clean out your hose away for the winter, clean it up fish. Clean the interior with sudsy water and drain interior. Store out of sun to prevent cracking. Wrap hose on its reel or coil neatly before storing.

Drain all gasoline from the mower. Turn on engine until the gas supply is gone from the carburetor.

Disconnect lead wire from spark plug, then hose down the underside of mower. Scrape off any remaining grass clippings.

Remove the spark plug and air cleaner. Follow the manufacturer's suggestions for replacement. Stamp Your owner's manual is the best source for oiling directions, too.

Gently sand rust spots on your garden cart. Wash cart with soapy water, rinse let dry.

Close all chemical containers, wipe clean, then destroy cleaning cloth. Label each container and store on a high shelf or in a locked cabinet - out of the reach of children and pets. Close and tape half-used bags of fertilizer. Store in a dry corner of your basement or garage.

Lift all plant stakes that won't be used during the winter months. Wash clean. Tie together to keep them organized.

Garden furniture: Although today's garden furniture is designed to resist the elements, some care is needed to keep it looking new.

The popular vinyl-upholstered cushions live up to their easy - care reputation. A quick wipe weekly with a damp cloth will prevent dirt accumulations. But if you've forgotten to do this during the summer months, now's the time to take care of any soil build-up. Wash thoroughly with soap and water, or use ammonia in water. A liquid household cleaner, diluted and used according to bottle directions, will do the job in a hurry, too.

Machine-wash removable canvas covers. To prevent shrinkage, put them back on furniture before they dry completely.

Furniture frames made of aluminum respond to cleaning with a mixture of ammonia and water. Outdoor wax (such as car wax) keeps aluminum in good condition. Use steel wool pads to remove scratches.

Clean up wrought-iron furniture with an ammonia wash. Work on rust spots with steel wool. When necessary, revive furniture with a metal primer coat, then new outdoor enamel.

Soap and water is the best combination for most wooden furniture. After several seasons of use, wooden furniture may need a new coat of clear varnish. On redwood items, re-stain, then varnish if you wish. Or, leave real redwood unfinished to weather naturally. Unstained pieces can be cleaned up with soapy water.
